

Himlung Himal (7162m)

Introduction

Himlung Himal 7,126 m climbing “adventure around far North West Himalaya between Manang and Manaslu region” is located in the western part of Nepal. Situated just above the ancient Tibetan village of Phu (Restricted area and climbers are required to get a special restricted area and climbing permit to enter) which is officially opened in 1992 for foreign expeditions and trekkers. The peak was first climb by Mr. Akio Koizumi from Japan on 3 October 1992. Now this peak is popular among the climbers as a preparation of Everest climbing. The mountain itself is situated close to Nepal-Tibet border between Annapurna and Manaslu Himalayan ranges, and because of that, part of the journey to reach it will involve trekking through the classic Annapurna-Manaslu trail. The last village accessible from the mountain is Phu Gaon (4080 m). The journey starts from Besisahar, the starting point of Annapurna Circuit Trek. Required total days for climbing Himlung including the trekking period is 32 up to 35 days. Mount Himlung climbing is a bit technical to climb. The trail is a mixture of snow, ice and rock with some steep faces and crevasses. Rope fixing, using Ice Axe and foot timing will be required to climb. Together with Xtreme Climbers Treks & Expedition, you will get all the support you need to make this expedition successful. The expedition will be operated and led by our experienced Sherpa climbers and guides. You will have plenty of time to learn mountaineering skills in the base camp that will be useful for you to make a successful attempt of the Himlung summit. The organizing of the expedition will be done on full board basis with full base camp service including all climbing equipments.
