

Pokalde (5806m) Option B

Introduction

Pokalde Peak, Standing in Khumbu region at some 14 kilometers southwestern direction from Mount Everest, Pokalde, It is one of the commercial popular tourist peak of Nepal which can be trekked without the aid of ice axes and crampons. Which is also known as Dolma Ri and it was first climbing in 1953 by a route from the 'Khongma-La' pass which lies at an elevation of 5,535m. along its North-ridge. Despite its relatively low altitude the mountain's first successful climbers were giants of the mountaineering world, a fact that is true of many of the Trekking peaks. Pokalde Peak is an insignificant-looking mountain when seen from Pheriche, from where it appears as a rocky ridge dominated by the vast bulk of Nuptse. Seen from the Labuche or Gorak Shep the peak looks more interesting. Raising to the south of the Khongma-La 5,535m. an infrequently traversed pass that leads into the Chukhung Valley. The northern side of the mountain has a small hanging glacier that is best reached along the ridge rising from the Khongma-La.
